DOPE FIEND IS CHASED BY POLICE

"Why do the people all hate a dope fiend?" W. Stewart, Chicago, asked as he stood trembling before Chief Thos. Morrissey this morning receiving his instructions to get out of Janesville and stay out. "We harm no one but ourselves and I can't understand why the people shun us like they would a leper," the man said. Stewart, a picture of despair, was taken into custody by the police yesterday afternoon after he had visited several doctors' offices in quest of dope. "I have to have it, I can't get it one way I will have to get it another," he said. As he stood before Chief Morrissey he trembled continually. "I am going to Beloit and then to Chicago and the only chance you ever have of seeing me again is if Beloit is in the same county as this place," he said as he staggered out the door.

COUPON CLIPPERS TO COLLECT MILLIONS OF U. S. DOLLARS

ple have been careless. There is a column in the national ledger headed "debt upon which interest has ceased." The item amounts to more than $1,000,000. Investigation shows that this amount of money is held in the treasury in the bonds issued during the Civil war, and at other periods, that have reached maturity but have never been redeemed.

Somewhere, somewhere, has probably lost these bonds in the drawer of an old bookcase that has gone out of fashion and has been stored away until it becomes "antique" enough to be restored to the library. Or some have been tossed through fires and burglaries and other accidents. Every now and then one of these old bonds turns up and is cashed.

Holders of most of the present war securities are likely to be so careless. And so it may as well be pointed out, right now, that it does no good to hold the bonds with their coupons attached, after these become due. The coupons are not of great interest, neither do the interest checks mailed in payment of interest to holders of non-coupon bonds. The coupons should be clipped promptly on Sept. 16, or as soon thereafter as convenient, and immediately re-invested in war savings stamps. In this way the interest money does not lie idle but is at once set to work.

The treasury department will mail 750,000 checks to holders of registered bonds Sept. 15.

Looks Hopeless.
Payment to investors of the war debt of a sum larger than that required to pay all the expenses of the government a few years ago seems to indicate a rather hopeless task, until one looks into the history of the debt of previous years. The total cost of the war between the states was approximately three and a half billions, according to a close estimate—a little more than the total of the cost of our part in the great war.

At the end of the Civil war there was talk, serious consideration even, of declaring the government bankrupt, like an insolvent individual, and wholly repudiating the national debt. There were men of influence and standing who believed the nation could never lift this staggering burden of debt. And yet, within 10 years government bonds that had sold as low as $50 in gold went up in price to as high as $100. That was due, in part, to the fact that the price of money of the dollar in 1864 was only 38.7 cents—that is, a paper dollar vouched for by two banks and by the government, was only worth that amount.

Good Idea to Hang On.
No such rise in the purchasing power of the dollar is likely to follow the present period of high prices and low money power. But many authorities state the belief that as production is increased, and the world settles down to a normal economic basis, prices will decline considerably. And so, it's a good idea right now to hang on to the dollar, and let it earn some more dollars.

When this country was something of a calf, and was wobbling around on its wobbly legs, not knowing whether it was going to live or not, it was handicapped by its first war debt. It cost our forefathers a little more than $50,000,000 to win their independence—a little less than the amount of interest that holders of third liberty bonds will reap in a few days. A bit later on, the war of 1812 sent the national debt up to $127,000,000. Then we had peace and prosperity for a long period. And from 1815 to 1835, inclusive, the annual income of the treasury substantially exceeded the expenditures. The debt was gradually diminished and after a few years, the United States, with a cash surplus in the treasury, presented what a historian has called "that happy specimen of a people substantially free from the smallest portion of debt." We had a great deal of land in those days, and the government sold it at a fair return to newcomers to our shores. That money helped to pay off the little obligation which we incurred in getting independence.

Then a panic came along in 1837 and the surplus in the treasury disappeared. There is no likelihood of another surplus for a long time. It will take at least 25 years to pay off the present war debt.

Many Buyers

Here is just another instance of the value of the Gazette classified columns. An implement firm advertised a tractor for sale, in a list of other machinery. After the ad was in a few nights they sold the tractor, and are having calls regularly on the rest of the implements they advertise. They are strong in their praise of Gazette classified and believe it is the real place to put their products before the people.

ROBBED OF MONEY WHILE TAKING NAP

Gilbert Yahn, taxi operator, reported to the police this morning that he was robbed of $90 while sleeping on a bench in front of a store on Main street between 6 and 6:30 o'clock this morning. Yahn told the police that he had worked during the night driving his cab and had just finished eating his breakfast when he decided to take a nap. "I had the money when I came out of the restaurant as I went to pay for my meal and the man with the money was gone," Yahn said. "When I awoke the money was gone."

Yahn believing he had a clue as to where his money went asked District Attorney Stanley Dunwiddie for a search warrant.

GRAIN

Chicago Grain Review.
Chicago, Sept. 9.—The lower prices in the corn market today resulted chiefly from the unexpected bearish showing of the government crop report. The general selling which took place, however, was also due more or less to prospects of a nation-wide strike of stockyard and packing house employees. Reports that owing to labor troubles freight was piling up in eastern ports, tended likewise to weaken the corn market. Opening prices, which ranged from 4c to 5 1/2c, were followed by a further drop in September and by moderate downward provisions. Selling how little power to rally.

On the declines there was free covering of shorts, but no other important demand. The market closed unsettled, 1c to 1 1/2c net lower, with September 1.61 1/2 and December 1.29 1/2 to 1.29 3/4.

Experts or Theorists—Which?

The packing industry is intricate, complex—far more so than the railroads or the telegraph.

Every day multiplying needs of society increase its problems and multiplying responsibilities demand more of it.

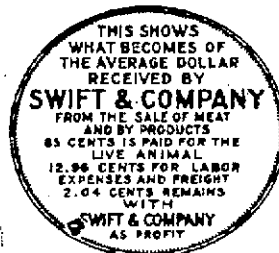

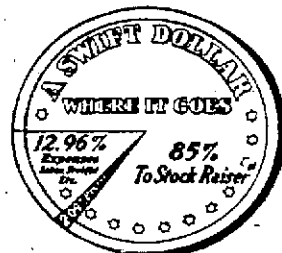

Highly trained experts, specialists of years' experience, thinkers and creative men, devote their lives, their energies, their activities, to solving the problems of the packing industry and meeting its widening duties.

Swift & Company is not a few dozen packing plants, a few hundred branch houses, a few thousand refrigerator cars, and a few million dollars of capital, but an organization of such men. It is the experience, intelligence, initiative and activity which operates this physical equipment.

Can this intelligence, this experience, this initiative and creative effort which handles this business at a profit of only a fraction of a cent per pound from all sources, be fostered through the intervention of political theorists, however pure their purposes? Or be replaced by legislation? Does Congress really think that it can?

Let us send you a Swift "Dollar". It will interest you.

WOMEN VOTERS.

How the women voters are all dressed up and no place to go is strikingly brought out in the following article by Harriet Taylor Upton, president of the Ohio State Suffrage association:

"The women of the United States are on the eve of political enfranchisement. The national amendment will undoubtedly be ratified by 38 states before the election of 1920.
But what women are ready to do the question is where will they go? They are not partisan. They have no political inheritance. They have considered themselves republicans or democrats because their fathers or husbands are, but distinctly not from any love of the party itself. Where will they go?"

"When men open their state campaigns they have bands and fireworks, and sometimes a little woman falling from a balcony with a parachute—to entertain the voters. The new voters demand, not bands and fireworks, but lower prices, and the political party which realizes this will be the successful party of the near future.

"Again, women are unalterably opposed to war. They said little about it in 1917 because they were over-less and because, in this great land of liberty, not only the men, but the people were chloroformed so that they should think. Women were silent observers. They could not help themselves; they sent their sons and prayed and hoped. They were promised a world safe for democracy, safe for the people, for poor people, for women, for children.

out disavowal,—just the same old alliances which have been coming up

Some great statesman will surely point it out, you argue; it must be ciety of war, recommends universal the other things which make for war.

IS HE BACK ON THE JOB?
A nation-wide campaign in which the younger brothers wearing the Boy Scout uniform will get out and plug for the older brothers who have been in the uniform of Uncle Sam's army.

Four hundred thousand Boy Scouts of America, under the leadership of James E. West of New York, chief scout executive, start this week on a whirlwind nation-wide campaign in behalf of the war and navy departments. The boys are asked to march the machinery of their 18,000 troops, to canvas practically every city and town in all the states of the union, and to enroll practically all employers, great and small, who will declare their willingness to re-employ their homecoming soldiers and sailors.

Colonel Arthur Woods, assistant to the secretary of war, in charge of securing employment for returned fighting men, will direct the Washington end of the drive.

As Mr. West says in his letter to the scouts, "The Boy Scouts of America are maintaining a splendid record for service under the slogan, 'The war is over, but our work is not.' The war department has presented to us a nation-wide opportunity for a piece of service which, I am sure, will appeal to every scout as being much worth while. It is desired that every scout, player of laborer, business house, businessman and individual—join in an effort to have 100 percent of former employers express their willingness to take back men in their employ who left to serve in the great war."

Each troop has been furnished with a sample of the citation which Colonel Woods issues on behalf of the war and navy departments to every patriotic employer, who has taken back or will take back those who left him for active navy service. The troops are pledged to secure at least one application for the citation from some employer for each scout in their membership.

"We find," says Colonel Woods to the boys, "that 80 percent of the employers in the United States—corporations, firms, and individuals—have taken back every man. The war and navy departments have prepared a handsome citation to be engrossed with the recipient's name, which is awarded to all who certify that they will re-employ their ex-service men.

We want to reward these patriotic firms. Thousands of them have applied for the citation already, because they have read of it in the newspapers, but we feel that we have not yet reached the great mass of those whom we wish to include in our Employers' Legion of Honor. The boy scouts can do this."

Each employer will be asked the question, "He is back from the job over there—is he back in his job over here?"

GEORGE F. WELLS.
Those who have had the pleasure of meeting George F. Wells, the new manager of the Chamber of Commerce, are favorably impressed with him. His first announcement made at the luncheon yesterday indicates a comprehensive view of Janesville's present needs as well as his future development. Mr. Wells' past experience has been varied and should fit him well for the manifold duties which surround the office he has assumed.

At this time especially will the responsibilities be particularly heavy.
He will need the whole-hearted support of every citizen to round out the program which the chamber has entered into under the guidance of his predecessor, Frank J. Green. Wells made it a point to call on Mr. Wells and bid him welcome, thereby exemplifying the Janesville spirit which today spells progress.

Q. Can earthquakes be forecast?

A. The best authorities on earthquakes explain that they are due to the slipping of one edge on the other at a fault or crack in the earth's crust.
The main fault in the western hemisphere extends from Alaska to Tierra del Fuego along the Pacific coast. The geologists know where there has been no slipping for a long time, and for that reason earthquakes are due at those points. They forecast earthquakes there.

Q. Can a bungalow have two stories?

A. The bungalow has all its rooms on one floor. There are cottages of the bungalow type that have two stories.

Q. What is meant by a tight scalp?

A. An unnatural condition of the scalp sometimes causes it to become abnormally tight and consequently unhealthy. Massage every day, and for while will loosen it up, stimulate the circulation of the blood in it, and cure it.

Q. How tall was Napoleon Bonaparte?

A. Historians say that the time of his coronation Napoleon Bonaparte was a little under five feet three inches, but he became fatter in later years and at his death measured scarcely over five feet.

Q. Has there been a colored man in the United States senate?

A. There have been two colored senators in the United States senate.
They were Hiram R. Revels, 41st congress, 1870-1871, and Blanche K.
Bruce, 47th congress, 1879-1881.

SYMPATHY
I couldn't sympathize with him.
Whose face was very long and sad.
He bade me know his tale of woe.
But still I thought he should be glad.
The skies above him still were fair.
His cheeks were bronzed by summer's sun.
And yet he wept, because he'd failed.
To profit by a cherished plan.

With him I could not sympathize
Who spoke of money he had lost;
Nor could I share the great despair
Of one whose hopes were touched by frost.

The song birds round about them sang.
They were still bliss by friendships true.
And they could greet the morning
sweet.
With strength to build their dreams anew.

But I could sympathize with him
Whose grief was pitiful to see.
The sun was high, and fair the sky.
Yet dark I knew his world to be.
For he had lost the one he loved.
Out of his life her soul had fled.
And I could share his deep despair.
For such a grief, I too, had known.

MT. ROBSON

Perhaps the wildest park in the world is Canada's recently created Mt.
Robson park, located in the northern Canadian Rockies. It was made a part of the Canadian park system just before the war, and few people have ever visited it because it is practically devoid of roads and trails. In 1913 the park boasted a single inhabitant.
Mt. Robson itself is an excellent sample of the tremendous and almost overwhelming beauty of the northern Rockies. It rises from the surrounding ridges, which are heavily forested in fir and spruce, as a steep cone of bare rock 8,000 feet high. Great glaciers armor its sides and front, and it is hemmed with snow.
From the snow cap and the glaciers descend swift, clear streams that leap over ledges in icy cataracts, flow like lives in the wind, and roaring through deep stone gorges, until they plunge into the forested regions below.
Just above timberline, between the region of barren rock and that of deep forest, there is a belt of soil which in summer is like a garden about the mountain's waist, for it is one great field of wild flowers. Purple aster,

COOPERATIVE STORE IS FAVORED BY COMMON COUNCIL

That the common council is in favor of a cooperative store was made evident at the regular meeting of the city council, held at the city hall last evening. Chapter 2 of the city ordinance, which says that every transient who wishes to dispose of goods in the city must pay a license of $5 a day, was amended to allow persons who wish to buy vegetables, fruit and other eatables at the lowest prices, to dispose of them at a low price, to do so without being compelled to pay so much. The amendment provides for not less than half carloads of eatables to be brought into the city. They are to be delivered in the original packages direct to the purchaser.

Alderman Cronin introduced the subject of the cooperative store by saying that this was an effective means of dealing a blow to the city. He said that it was time that the council protected the people from high prices and boosted projects which would aid the citizens in reducing the high cost of living.

Hastings Up Action. Alderman Hill moved that rules be suspended and that the ordinance be given its third reading and be put to a vote. The ordinance, as by that time, was read and passed.

Alderman Cronin expressed his approval of the amendment. He said that he was sure that the people of Janesville knew that a carload of peaches or potatoes was to be sold at a low price, they would all avail themselves of the opportunity.

The people in the city have misunderstood the ordinance, Mayor Hill said. By the statement which Mayor Hill made many people in the city got the idea that the council was opposed to the idea of a cooperative store.

Many complaints have come to the council from the people asking me what the council has to do to suppress the formation of a store which would be a benefit to all of the citizens and that that statement should be corrected. What we want is a cooperative store, not a municipal store.

Special Salaries Paid. The bills of the city were presented by Alderman Ransom, chairman of the finance committee. In addition to the regular bills were those salaries which were paid to the city employees for the month of August.

A SOLOMON'S KNOTTED BELT

By Eleanor C. Moore

Instructor in Handicraft, Edgerton, Ill.

We may not know why it's called "Solomon's knot," but anyway that's the right name for it. It is the knot for making belts, and the wounded soldiers used to make in French hospitals.

Solomon's knot (Fig. 2) is nothing more than the old-fashioned knot with two cords run through the middle. The four cords to the ring of a chair and practice tying this knot before starting the belt.

To tie the first half of the knot (Fig. 1), you hold the two middle cords firmly between the thumb and finger. Pass the left-hand cord down, under, and across to the right, leaving a loop on the left. Then pass the right-hand cord down under the left cord over the middle ones, and through the loop. Pull up tight.

The second half is the same, but in the reverse direction. The left-hand cord (now on the right) goes down, under, and across. The right-hand cord (now on the left) comes under the left, up, over, and through the loop. Pull up tight.

Having learned the knot, the rest is easy. To make a belt 1 1/2 inches wide and 2 yards long, take 16 4-yard strands of No. 12 seine twine. Tie all 16 evenly to chair rung. Beginning on the left, tie a Solomon's knot with each four cords, making an even row of four knots. Next time across drop the first two strands on the left and make an even row of three knots (Fig. 4). Continue until the belt is complete.

Finish by dropping successively two cords on each side until the belt comes to a point of one knot in the middle.

By using fancy colored cards, and a little ingenuity, any girl can make a belt to suit her own taste.

The belt can be made in a hammock, can be made the same as a portfolio.

Having learned the knot, the rest is easy. To make a belt 1 1/2 inches wide and 2 yards long, take 16 4-yard strands of No. 12 seine twine. Tie all 16 evenly to chair rung. Beginning on the left, tie a Solomon's knot with each four cords, making an even row of four knots. Next time across drop the first two strands on the left and make an even row of three knots (Fig. 4). Continue until the belt is complete.

Finish by dropping successively two cords on each side until the belt comes to a point of one knot in the middle.

By using fancy colored cards, and a little ingenuity, any girl can make a belt to suit her own taste.

The belt can be made in a hammock, can be made the same as a portfolio.

SCHOOLS ARE FILLED TO CAPACITY; LARGEST ENROLLMENT EVER

Larger than ever before in the history of the public schools of Janesville is this year's enrollment. That the city is growing up is shown by the number of children who entered the schools on the first day.

A count by rows was taken in the high school this morning which total 508 students. Last year the second day total was near the 450 mark. This is by far the largest enrollment that the high school has yet had.

Principal W. A. Bassford said today that students would be assigned to their seats this week. The assembly which was made to seat 550 students, is by far too small. Freshmen will be given seats in the various recitation rooms.

By 10 o'clock this morning H. H. Faust, city superintendent of schools, had the enrollment from each of the nine grade schools in the city. All were complete except the Lincoln school. The report of the number of pupils who attend the vocational school all day was not received. The enrollment of each of the nine grade schools is: Emerson, 168; Adams, 311; Washington, 290; Douglas, 184; Garfield, 138; Webster, 181; Grant, 129; Jackson, 66; and Lincoln 51; total, 1653.

FAUST IS PLEASED WITH SCHOOL WORK ON OPENING DAYS

"Everything is running smoothly in all of the grade schools," said Supt. H. H. Faust this morning. "The children are doing well in the nine graded schools. He is well pleased with the way that the teachers and pupils have taken hold of the work and settled right down to business."

Another thing in favor of the system is the no dismissal from school was necessary to enable children to purchase books. The only supplies that were bought by the children were such as pencils, crayons, writing books and paper.

In a few grades there are too many children in a grade. This will all be equalized, Mr. Faust said, so that each teacher will have time to work with classes of the right number.

Newark Girl Takes Part in State Contest

Marguerite Graham, district No. 6, Newark, will represent the city in the state contest which will be held at the state fair in Milwaukee, Wednesday.

The town contests were held at the Court House this spring. Marguerite Graham received the highest average in the county, which was 50. Three subjects were tested, writing, spelling and arithmetic.

Each representative from the 11 counties in the state has his expenses paid to the fair. The winner of the state contest is awarded a gold medal. Supt. O. D. Antisiel went to Milwaukee today to be present at the contest.

Heart and Home Problems

BY ELIZABETH THOMPSON

LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO MRS. THOMPSON, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl nineteen years old and supposed to be a virgin. I just seem to be in the way all the time at home, although I am the oldest of seven children and I do try to help as much as possible during spare hours.

But what is the use when I only get snubbed? If I ask my sister to go with me someplace she will refuse and answer in the most recent way.

I am very fond of music and am studying voice with a teacher here in town. This teacher tells me I have an unusual voice and encourages me all the time, but when at home my mother will only pick on me, saying I practice too much and tell me to quit my lessons, although I work all day long and pay for the lessons myself.

Some people tell me I am a lucky girl, but they could only look into my heart they would think differently. Upon all these troubles comes the hardest to bear. There is a young man of six years older than myself employed in the same building I am. He is married and has one boy. This young man shows an interest in me and is so intelligent and never talking to one and the minute this man saw me he came right over and asked politely if he could dance with me. He danced with me twice and during the dance he pressed my hand and said:

I have never let him know that I care for him. My health will fail me, I am so unhappy. I beg you to show me a little sympathy.

CAMILIA.

I do sympathize with you because you are on the verge of doing something very cruel and dishonorable. You have no right to think of or encourage that married man. Perhaps you think you are suffering, but you do not know what suffering is in comparison with that of a mother who has lost her husband's love. If you have love in your heart you will give up your position and work where you will not see the man. But if you stay where you are and tempt him and yourself you are hard and selfish and unworthy.

In regard to your family, forget yourself and think about giving pleasure and love instead of getting it. You must learn to be less selfish and then you will find that your life is very much happier and full of love.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl fifteen years old. I have a good home and I have a good time and a good friend and we do not get with the boys, for my grandma says that if she gives a girl to have everything so comfortable and to be so happy.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: It is proper for girls of fourteen to go riding with boys if their parents approve.

Girls of fourteen are very much too young to go riding with boys. This question has been answered hundreds of times, it seems to me.

SMART SIMPLICITY MARKS FALL GOWNS

HEALTH TALKS

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO DR. BRADY, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE

DRIVING A RASH IN.

Mrs. S. Camp is back. She has been away on a case. She seems as industrious as ever. She works long after the doctor has gone and gone, and her work counts for something in the mortality statistics, too.

Her latest warning to anxious mothers concerns the care of children with eruptive fevers such as scarlet fever and measles. Mrs. Camp has it from an old doctor that such patients should not be bathed, lest you drive in the rash. It is equally dangerous to permit a child with scarlet fever or measles to have fresh air, for foul air, according to her notions, also tends to preserve an invalid's vitality, just as high does.

There is no denying the fact that a rash sometimes "goes in," that is, it fades, just as a smile may fade from a child's face. When a smile fades in, and does the child just as much harm. The rash of measles or of scarlet fever is easily made to fade from the skin by the pressure of your finger, showing that it depends upon an excess of blood in the spots. Press the skin gently and the spots under your finger disappear.

But as soon as you release the finger, the spots come back. They depend, therefore, upon the circulation. Remember that the rash fades in "goes in," only as a consequence of some change in the circulation. Don't let Mrs. Camp's yammering confuse you about that.

Suppose a child with scarlet fever or measles develops some severe complication which produces a failure of the circulation. Then, as a result of the failing circulation, the rash may disappear or "go in." The rash, therefore, is the clearest proof that the rash has gone in and settled itself in the brain or the kidneys or the lungs or the heart or whatever the trouble may be. To any intelligent mind Mrs. Camp's logic is ridiculous.

A child with measles or scarlet fever should have a comfortable bath in bed every day. The patient deserves cleanliness and thrives on it. Cleanliness aids the child in withstanding the skin in the best of condition to do its share of the work of eliminating disease poisons from the body.

A tepid bath not only refreshes a feverish patient but helps Nature in the fight against such an infection as measles or scarlet fever, because such a bath stimulates and invigorates the nervous system which controls the circulation.

The first principle of intelligent nursing, and the sure sign of an intelligent nurse, is a daily bath for the patient, irrespective of the nature of the illness, the season of the year. Only the obstinate Saltygrubs foster the delusion that it is unsafe to bathe an invalid—because the delusion makes more leisure for rocking-chair service.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS. Purely Mental. Does chronic catarrh affect the mind of a person? Does it make a person nervous and rundown? Does it interfere with the function of the stomach so that it won't assimilate the food and get the strength out of it? Does it—

ANSWER—Come, come, break away from the almanac. Don't you know that almanac medicine is no longer taken seriously? Catarrh is just a meaningless term employed by hawkeyed persons who need the money.

Misguided Mother. Our five-year-old girl still wets the bed. I have punished her repeatedly. ANSWER—Bed-wetting is not a vi-rouse her first.

ACT II.

Scene 1—Princess Tillie's boudoir.

Enter a French maid.

Alone, there—Princess Tillie, hairdressers, manicures, dressmakers, drapers, face-painters, etc.

To come yet—A certain Ambrose shell comb.

Princess Tillie. What? My comb—my comb—where 'tis it? Without you comb, I dare not ever be wed!

Princess Tillie. Oh, lady, say not so! For when thou shalt thou not be the comb placed now inside thy pet ostrich.

Princess Tillie. Without you comb I will not wed, so hie me back to my gold bed.

(Exit P. Tillie in high dudgeon.)

ACT III.

Scene 1—Same as Scene 1—Act 1.

Enter P. Maid.

P. Maid. Sire! No bride thou'lt have upon this day!

K. Fish. Poul devil! Avaunt! Away—Away! Or by Saint Gus, thy head's small pay!

Exeunt the whole gang in unseemly hurry.)

Scene II—Tillie's boudoir.

Enter Dishup, after knocking thrice. C. Juggles. What's this, your highness? Why acting phoney? I'm all fixed up to perform the ceremony.

P. Tillie. It is just as before I hath said. I will not, will not ever be wed.

And King Fish, the groom, I'll ever hate, without you comb upon my plate!

(Exit Cardinal, with these final words.)

(The End.)

CLIMALENE
Softens Water—Saves Soap

Makes Dishwashing Easy

A teaspoonful of CLIMALENE in the dishpan softens the water, and cleanses the dishes perfectly. No soap is needed.

CLIMALENE is composed of white mineral crystals—no acids, no grit, no fats. It dissolves readily in hot or cold water. It will not injure the most delicate skin, yet it cleanses quickly and thoroughly. It takes the drudgery out of dishwashing.

10c At Your Grocer's

A CHANCE TO LIVE

CLIMBING UP. Poor, frantic, stupid woman! Shabbier than Bernia and herse, more miserable even. They had been repulsed with shoves and clubbings from the police and laughter from the crowd. They got nothing. Never would get anything. And Bernia would never get anything. Millions of other young men like him by "smashing things."

Slowly Annie began to see something. Gradually she was beginning to "smash" things. A fantastic smile popped into her mind. Without knowing why, the recollection of an "amusement" at Coney Island called "the funny stairs" came into her mind. She had seen these stairs when long ago when she went with the factory girls and their "gentlemen friends." How they had scrambled over their efforts to climb those giggling stairs. By sheer strength they tried to back the motion. But it was too strong. They fell down, bruising their elbows and knees. And the crowd laughed. They got up again and tried to force their way to the top. The jumping staircase only mocked them.

But finally they got the trick. It was perfectly simple after all. You just stepped on top of the rail. Your feet went with the stairs, adapted to the movement in theirs. These "funny stairs" seemed to represent exactly the social and industrial system of today.

"Bernia," she began, "breaking the little silence that is not the answer—'smashing things.' It ought to be. People ought not to be treated as they are. I grant you that. And making a fuss ought to be to matters. I too grant you that. But things are not as they ought to be; they're as they are. And the way to beat them is to go with them till you get somewhere. Then, when you have got somewhere, you can do something to help change things."

Bernia turned and looked at his small wife. From the height of his spiritual awakening he gazed down at the woman who "did not understand." He had found his Cause, adopted its platform, been made alive to the course to pursue. He felt just a little pity for Annie, who had not.

"And how," he said, patiently, "will

I get somewhere? How will I help change things? Is a shipping clerk at twelve a week?"

"First of all," answered Annie slowly; she was still thinking it out, still groping in a half-light of understanding. "You must not go on being a shipping clerk at twelve a week. Now wait a second, Bernia, I'm not finding fault. I'm suggesting."

"I'm to be president of my tobacco company, I suppose," interrupted Bernia. "Maybe—some time. It wouldn't be so impossible. But there'd be a lot to do first. You could go to whoever is in charge—"

"Arkright," put in Bernia, "he's the fellow that hires and fires." Very well, Arkright," went on Annie with serene practicality, "go to Mr. Arkright and ask him what to do to get a better job. You had a better job at Simms's. You've got intelligence and experience and—everything. Find out if there isn't something better in your place that you can do—if there isn't some chance to advance."

Bernia remembered Arkright had said when he employed him "You can work up." This idea of Annie's "wasn't so rotten" after all. It mightn't come to anything, but there'd be no harm trying it. The next day Annie met Mrs. Rakitsky in the hallway.

"They've raised milk on us again," was the greeting of the tailor's wife. Six cents a pint already—how will! God knows now what we do!"

Word comes from Paris that clothes are more elaborate and more fantastic than they have been for years and that short sleeves, low-cut bodices and much ornamentation are the outstanding features of the newest garments. But America does not seem to hear or at least does not heed. Skirts are almost as long as they were in the spring, sleeves are long and tight, especially on the street "cracks," and trimming unless it is in the shape of embroidery is almost unknown on the more informal frocks.

This frock is an excellent example of the popular one-piece dress for fall. It is Lady Duff Gordon's most exquisite simple gown. The small square, embroidered pockets just below the belt and the head chain are the only decorations in evidence. The straight lines are unbroken save for a very narrow belt which is rather loose, and the sleeves are long and snug, while the neckline is cut up close about the bone. Pointed twill is the material used and beige is the color.

Baked Baby Lima Beans—These tiny limas are most delicious when baked like the ordinary navy beans. Wash one-half pound of beans well and then look over carefully and discard all bruised and damaged beans. Soak over night in cold water. In the morning wash again and then place in a saucepan and cover with cold water. Bring to a boil and then turn into a colander and let the cold water run on them, then place in a saucepan and cover with boiling water and cook for twenty minutes. Turn into a baking dish and add one cup of stewed tomatoes, one onion, minced fine, one green pepper, minced fine, one tablespoon of salt, one teaspoon of paprika, one-half cup of salad oil, and two tablespoons of syrup.

Mix well and then bake for two hours in a slow oven.

Macaroni Gravy—Cook one-half pound of macaroni in boiling water for twenty minutes; and then drain. Blanch under cold running water and set one-half aside for next day's lunch. Now mince three onions and one green pepper very fine, then place four tablespoons of salad oil in a frying pan. When hot add the onions and peppers and one cup of stewed tomatoes, the macaroni, two tablespoons of corn starch dissolved in one-half cup of water. Bring this mixture to a boil, stirring constantly. Cook for ten minutes and then season with two teaspoons of salt, one teaspoon of paprika, and four tablespoons of grated cheese.

TESTED RECIPES.

Cabbage Salad—Shred cabbage, add a little chopped onion and pimento; mix with boiled dressing seasoned with mustard.

THIS WAY OUT

By FREDERIC S. ISHAM

Author of "Aladdin from Broadway," "Under the Rose," "Nothing but the Truth," Etc.

"No use waiting for money," said Alexander. "Didn't I earn it?"

"You did."

"If I thought you were trying to get out of paying," he began.

"Oh, Alexander!" interrupted the lady reproachfully.

"Women like to cheat!"

"Not all, surely," argued the lady, in that same said tone. "You surely would except some of us?"

"Blame fow," said Alexander. "About all alike!"

"Say not so," she breathed. "Do not put us all in the same category."

"Anyhow, I stick by. Where you go, I go!" He grinned uncouthly. "No cheat if you don't get the chance. I stick by, until I get cold cash! Maybe longer!"

"How mercenary! And with the stage all set for—romance! The novelists would never forgive you, Alexander!"

"Romance?" said Alexander, puckering his brow. "What's that?"

"What indeed?" said the lady. "A delight that dwells in the shadow of a rose; a thrill that mounts on a moon-beam!"

"Craziness," remarked Alexander, looking at the lady. Then he rattled several coins in his pocket. "When I see them, I get so satisfied."

"Is it Alexander I hear speaking, or the World?" murmured the lady sadly.

"Bah! Everybody knows that," said Alexander.

"It is the world!" The lady sighed; then arose, with a light laugh. "And now let us go aboard."

"The steamer?"

"Yes, I have two tickets."

"Then give me mine," Alexander held out his hand.

"Oh, no," said the lady, "you have to see after my luggage first. You see, I told the hotel man, I have my own private porter."

"Me?"

"You?"

As she spoke she smiled sweetly. First victory of the day, for her! And she had purchased a particularly heavy trunk—one made of tin.

"Whew! that darn heavy trunk!" said Alexander, breathing hard at the wharf.

"I thought you were so strong," said the lady. "I thought you could clear out a whole winerom of loaders, all by yourself."

"You pick out heaviest trunk on purpose!" Suspectingly.

"How can you attribute such motives to me?" she said chidingly.

"Drop him, from top of building, no hurt," said Alexander.

"That's just the point," said the lady. "But he's a scoundrel! A deck-hand took the trunk from Alexander and the latter followed the lady up a gangplank."

"This calls for steering," said the man.

"Steering?" said Alexander.

"Yes; up forward with you, my man!"

"But—I want to be near her," expostulated Alexander.

"You can't—on this!"

"But, she buy me this. A fine trick!"

"I can't waste any more time on you. Down you go!"

And Alexander did. On the tiny stowage deck, forward, he looked up and saw the lady and gritted his teeth. A mean trick, he repeated; and he, her husband! Again Alexander looked up; some one dropped a cigar ash and some of it got in Alexander's eye. He shook his fist at the individual. Did he hear a light musical laugh? He would almost have sworn to the fact.

"I fix you," muttered Alexander, looking up at the alluring image of the lady leaning against the rail, so far above him. But she did not look down; she seemed otherwise engrossed in the ship got under way. Alexander settled himself upon a hard bench and gave himself up to apparently moody reflections. The lady moved away. Now Alexander seemed a statue of patience and resignation.

He didn't see the lady again for quite a long time, and then under circumstances most unusual.

CHAPTER IV

The ship had struck a mine. This, in itself, was not unusual; rather to be expected, in this mad, mad world! My lady had been in the stateroom when it happened; her door had been jammed by the force of the concussion and it was some time before she could get out. When she did reach the deck, the life-boats had left; she called, but no one heard. The ship lurched and she sprang wildly into the sea. Then her brain became blurred, and after that there was a blank.

When she opened her eyes and consciousness began to return to her, she saw Alexander. She did not feel exactly surprised; she had become rather accustomed to seeing him. He had grown into a species of habit with her. "So here you are again?" she observed.

"Yes," said Alexander, not quite so harshly as usual.

"Looks like late, doesn't it?" said the lady.

Alexander did not answer. He was not given to philosophizing.

"I suppose I should say 'Where am I,'" murmured the lady.

"Humph!" said Alexander, but still not so harshly as his wont.

"Though," she went on, "the query would be entirely superfluous. It is quite apparent, isn't it?"

"It is," conceded Alexander.

"We—we are on a hatch, or something."

"Life-raft?" corrected Alexander.

"How odd! Perhaps I should say, how convenient—I mean, the life-raft," observed the lady, rather incoherently.

Then she saw she was fastened to the raft by a rope, passed around her slender waist. Alexander was unfazed, sitting at his ease; he seemed able to stay on, without any extraneous aid. For a landlubber, he appeared at home. The lady looked at the rope.

"I don't remember doing that," she said.

"What?" said Alexander.

"Tying it."

"Don't you?" He grinned. "Oh, women do a lot of things they—"

"Stop!" Imperiously. "If there's one thing I dislike more than any other, it's deception—or attempted deception," she added. "You tied it."

"Of course!" Nonchalantly.

"Then why didn't you say so at once?" Accusingly.

"Much talk about nothing," said Alexander.

"You think it was nothing to have tied me to the raft so I couldn't slide into the sea?"

Alexander shrugged. My lady's eyes began to shine. She began to see vaguely—very vaguely—new qualities in Alexander.

Alexander put out his big hands. "It was easier than to have to hold you on," he said simply.

My lady subsided. So? He looked upon her as a bale of hay, or something of the kind. That was the kind of hero your clod of a peasant was! My lady, be it understood, had been accustomed to admiration, adulation, adoration. All kinds of men had desired her, for all manner of reasons. She had been given to understand, in the heyday of her triumphs, not so long ago, that she had what might be called a species of "universal appeal."

bale of hay!" Alexander didn't blink. "I do not want you to slide off," he muttered.

"How kind!"

"Oh, it wasn't any bother!"

"I'm so glad of that!"

"Pooh!" said Alexander. "You're again saying things you don't mean."

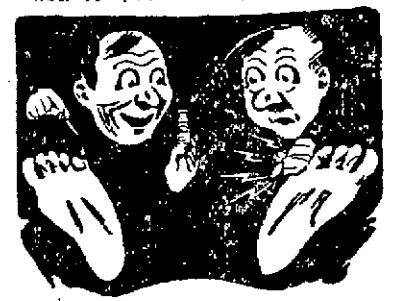

"And why shouldn't I?" she challenged him. "If it wasn't for the illusions—"

Dinner Stories

Dad was an irresponsible wag in his younger days, and every once in so often it breaks out on him again. "I have been eating peach pickles for the last 40 years," he remarked yesterday evening, as he deftly dissected one of his better half's pickling, "and here is something I have never seen before."

"Well, what is it?" asked mom, bristling.

"This!"

And he scooped out the seed and exhibited it.

They were speaking of English humor, and the Englishman now dwelling in Pittsburgh offered the following as a sample:

He was riding on a London tramcar when the driver became involved in an altercation with the conductor on the rear of a car just ahead. Both swore at one another violently as the cars moved slowly through a congested street. Finally, being basted in the verbal battle the conductor tied a piece of string around the end of a lead pencil and then dangled the pencil toward the driver. The latter became more vituperative than ever, keeping up his harangue until the front car turned into another street. The Englishman said he was curious, and asked the driver why the dangle pencil had made him swear so violently.

"Oh, that is just a little joke between ourselves. You see, my father was hanged," he explained.

"They are very particular at the new bakeshop. The girls who wait on customers have to wear white gloves."

"Yes, and I'm told they don't even allow the ladyfingers to touch the other cookies."

The Woman's Roosevelt Memorial association, started with the purpose of purchasing the house where Colonel Roosevelt was born and restoring it, already have 30 thousand of the $65,000 needed for the project.

To Insulate Your House Is as Important as to Roof It

Use Flaxlinum between the walls and beneath the roof. It cuts the fuel bills one-third by keeping out the cold and keeping in the heat in winter. Makes a cooler house in summer, too.

NO ONE WITH SOUND SENSE would think of building a house without a roof. But a great many people build houses without properly insulating them—especially people building for the first time.

After the house is finished and you have moved into it, when the penetrating northwest winds begin to cut up antics and your house simply won't warm up no matter how much fuel you burn, is not the time to remember how much comfort good insulation would have brought you.

But right now—while you are building or planning to—is the time to decide that you will insulate your new home, and insulate it satisfactorily with Flaxlinum.

Flaxlinum Supersedes All Old Insulations

The old way was to put thicknesses of tar paper or back plaster between the walls and let it go at that.

But, for nine years now, Flaxlinum has shown builders a better way. For, Flaxlinum is the same satisfactory material that is used in railroad refrigerator cars and in the better grade of home refrigerators.

You know that the success of a good refrigerator is in making the inside of it impervious to outside temperature. That is exactly what Flaxlinum, at moderate cost, accomplishes for the inside of your home.

A layer of Flaxlinum one-half inch thick, the thickness in which it is ordinarily used, is equivalent in heat and cold resistance to four solid inches of back plaster, or to thirty thicknesses of building paper. Flaxlinum is rat- and vermin-proof, and it can't crack like back plaster when the building settles.

Cuts Fuel Bills One-Third Keeps Out Summer Heat

Your average fuel saving will be 33% when your house is insulated with Flaxlinum. In just a few winters its moderate first cost will be paid for this way. And after that it will keep on saving fuel money for you, adding living comfort to you home.

For Flaxlinum laughs at outside temperature. It is an impenetrable seal against all weather changes. Your house will be a cool house when the scorching sun of summer blazes as well as a cozy, warm house in frigid weather.

Flaxlinum is sold by leading building material dealers everywhere. It is specified by the best architects and endorsed by reputable contractors. If you do not know the name of your nearest Flaxlinum dealer, write us. Free sample and literature sent on request. In writing, please state what kind of building you are interested in.

Thin, Irritable Child

Gained Flesh, Strength and Good Nature by Taking Vinol

Middletown, Conn.—"I used Vinol for my little girl 5 years old for a run-down, nervous condition. She was thin, irritable all the time and had no appetite. In a week I noticed an improvement and now she has a good appetite, has gained in flesh and strength and is much pleasanter to live with."—Mrs. C. B. Wilkinson.

There is no secret about Vinol. It owes its success in such cases to beef and cod liver peptones, iron and manganese peptones and glycerophosphates, the oldest and most famous body-building tonics known. Smith Drug Co. Vinol is sold in Brod-head by W. J. Smith and druggists everywhere.

Constipation, Stomach

Trouble and Catarrh.

National Home, Wis., May 12, '19.

"When I commenced taking Number 40 For The Blood, I was suffering with chronic constipation of a good many years standing, which finally developed into stomach trouble which got so bad I was unable to eat anything that did not cause great suffering. I tried a good many doctors as well as everything I could hear of that was recommended for my complaint. I was also troubled with catarrh of long standing and I had dropsical swellings in my feet and ankles which the doctors said was caused by a weak heart. I had about given up hope of being much better when I saw an ad. of your No. 40 in a country paper and concluded to try it. I felt so much better after taking one bottle that I sent direct to you for three more bottles. I have taken about two and a half bottles and while not feeling entirely well, I feel by continuing the use of 40, I will get to feel as well as I could reasonably expect for a man of my age, 75 years. I hardly know how to estimate the value of the benefit I have already received from the use of No. 40 and cheerfully recommend it to any one suffering from the same. Morris Law, 40119 is a combination of the best alterations selected from the best prescriptions received and compounded by J. C. Mendenhall, Evansville, Ind., 40 years a druggist. THE GAZETTE'S PAGE OF SPORTS

By George McManus

JANES WILL PLAY IN MILWAUKEE, SUNDAY; BRODIE WILL PITCH

The Janes will be on the road next Sunday instead of home as called for by the revised schedule of the Lake Shore league. They are booked to meet the McCoy All Stars in Milwaukee on that date, playing the last game of the season with the same team. In Janesville, Sunday's contest originally scheduled to be played in Milwaukee, was later changed to Janesville, and then reversed back to the Cream City.

It will be played as the wind-up to a celebration to be staged in the Brewster park there. Preceding it will be a game for the amateur championship of Milwaukee. Much interest has been around and it is probable that it will be the largest crowd that the Janes have ever performed before.

Eddie Brodie of Milwaukee, one of the leading pitchers in the Western Canada league this season, has been signed to pitch Sunday and according to manager Murphy, he will positively be on the job. An array of stars will back him up, including such men as Al Miller at short, Ervin Bedard at catcher, Krause, late of the Northwestern league, at first and in the outfield respectively, Aaron at second, Brausen on third and Kelch and Biglow, Samson stars in the garden.

NEW BALL TEAM TO BE FORMED; FIRST GAME HERE SUNDAY

While James A. Murphy's Janes are playing in Milwaukee next Sunday, a new Janesville team will be playing at the fair grounds here. After several weeks of discussion, E. R. Winslow, one of the leading bugs in this city, announced today that he would agree to manage a team and would arrange for the first game Sunday with the Durand (Ill.) Nationals here. This is the team that is due to meet Footville on the following Wednesday at Durand and the following Sunday at Footville.

Manager Winslow is getting a team together which he guarantees will furnish some real baseball. The line-up will be announced later in the week. Use of the fair grounds for Sunday has been donated by Manager Murphy of the Lawrence Janes.

FOOTBALL PROSPECTS CONSIDERED BRIGHT

Football prospects at the local high school have taken on a brighter aspect as the result of the securing of Wilfrid C. Lewis as coach. Although there is more than the usual dearth of material for a winning eleven, better is expressed that Coach Lewis will be able to develop a team to compare favorably with any team in this section. He had great success on the gridiron in his four years at Menasha. The call for candidates will probably be issued by Coach Lewis the latter part of this week or early next week. A field of 25 to 30 men is promised for the opening practice.

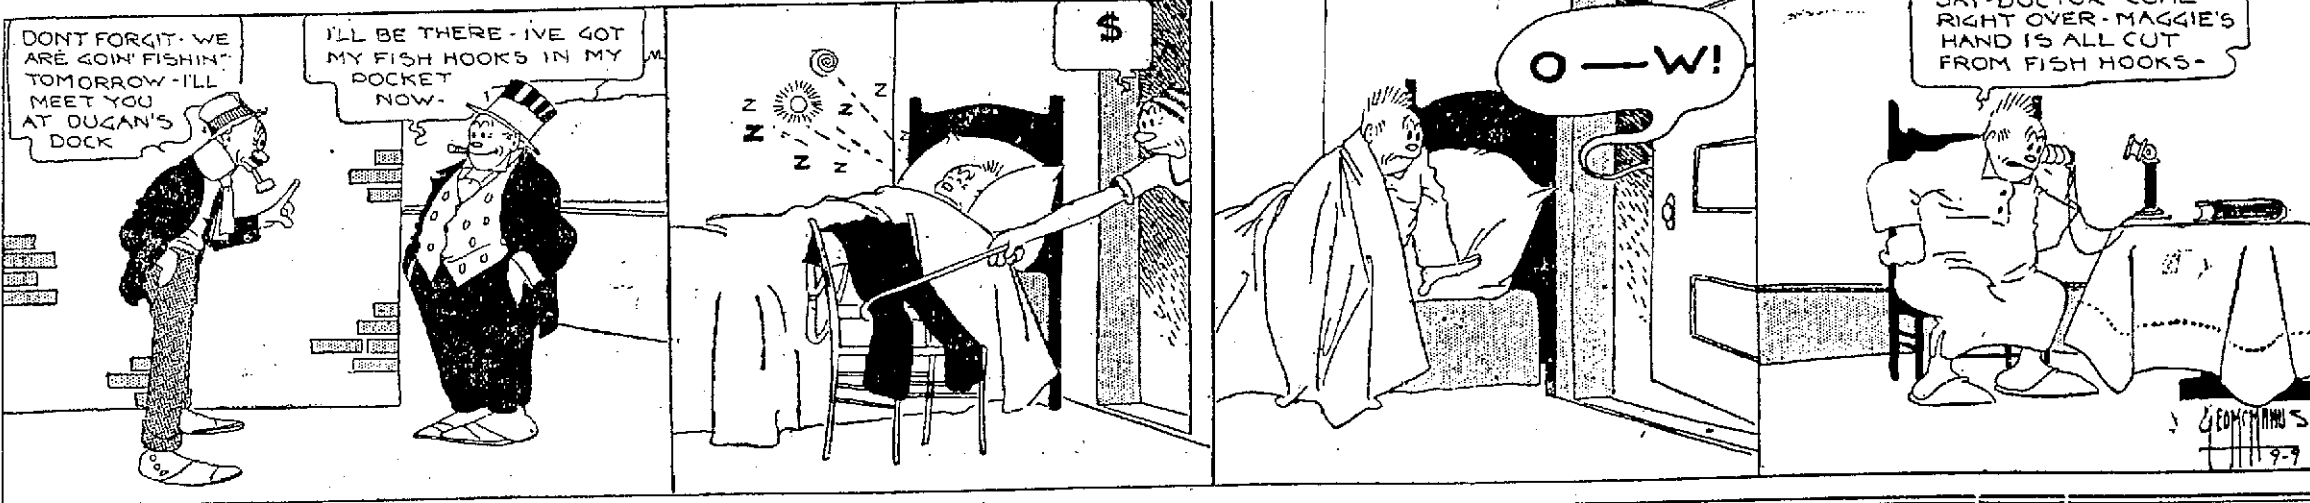

BABE RUTH BREAKS HOME RUN RECORD

NEW YORK—Sept. 9.—Babe Ruth of the Boston Braves ran into the right field in the first game of the Boston-New York doubleheader here yesterday, his 25th circuit drive of the year, breaking the established major league record. Freeman of the Washington National league club had held the record for years when he hit 25 home runs in 1899.

BRINGING UP FATHER

Gleason's Strategy Has Been Great Factor in His Success With Chicago

Kid Gleason.

By N. E. BROWN

If Kid Gleason leads the White Sox to the American league pennant—and at this writing his outfit was headed that way with open space behind them—there will be no said attached to the victory. No one can rise up on a fence some place and shout, "They bought the flag for him!" Kid Gleason started in outfit, mostly in Charley's garage, cleaned out the carbon, lightened up the transmission, supplied the needed gas (brains) and has it running ahead of the field in the free-for-all.

Although the White Sox won the pennant in 1917, they did not impress the critics as being a super baseball outfit. The Giants lost the world series to the Yankees, mostly through Giant errors of omission and commission. But when the 1918 season opened the White Sox still looked like the class of the American league because it was figured that Urban Faber would be about the only real star upon called upon for war service by Uncle Sam. But you know what happened. By the time Uncle Sam hooked a half a dozen regulars and half a dozen more beat the barrier by jumping to the shipyard circuit the team was completely wrecked. This spring when the White Sox returned from their training journey ready for the fray the White Sox fans said: "We wish them luck, but they can't win the pennant with only three pitchers." Faber, Williams and Cicotte were the only pitching bats the team possessed.

But Gleason wasn't crying. He started in with what he had and kept plugging. Faber failed to hit a fast pace and Cicotte and Williams were his only really dependable hurlers. But by juggling them and using Faber, Danforth, Kerr and his other hurlers with care and cunning he got

PLAY BALL

If A. A. Slugg, famous athletic director of the University of Chicago, were to walk out on the Janesville field and tell you what "generalship" means in football play, would you listen? If T. E. Jones, of the University of Wisconsin were to tell you what he knows about "The Forward Pass," would you pay attention to him? Both will tell you these and many more good things through the Gazette in the new series, "Sports for Boys."

The team going at a good clip, despite the fact that Pelech, John Collins and two or three other men he counted on to slug the ball hadn't found their batting eyes. Then his infield was hit by injuries—and Gandli's suspension following his imitation of Willard against "Tee" Speaker. Gleason showed his knowledge of his players by sending Swede Tiesberg to first, using McMullin and Weaver interchangeably at third and short. Risberg, new at the job, made good at first, felded well and hit fairly well.

The kid's success in working Williams and Cicotte "to death" without weakening their effectiveness lies in his willingness to yank them the minute they are hit hard. He uses two or three of his other hurlers, if necessary to hold down the opposition the rest of the game and puts it up to his sluggers to pull the game out of the fire. In this way he doesn't allow Cicotte or Williams to waste their strength a single inning.

He has tuned the team up to play every kind of ball—the slugging, sacrifice and hit and run games. The team averages show that they shine at all brands.

The first woman assistant to the district attorney of New York, is Miss Rose Rothenberg, who will deal with cases in the women's court.
